Parents:

On Saturday, February 27, 2010, the Marbury administration was advised that a student had contracted a form of meningitis. Immediately upon receiving this information, Marbury began disinfecting classrooms, lockers, and water fountains with antibacterial cleaners.

Today, it has been confirmed by the Alabama Department of Public Health that the student has been diagnosed with a non-contagious strain of meningitis which requires no prophylaxis treatment for family, friends, or students.

School and health officials are unsure how the student diagnosed with meningitis was exposed to it at this point.

Parents are always concerned about their children, and we are too. We want to make sure all of our students are safe.

If you would like any further information please refer to www.cdc.gov website on the topic of meningitis.

Sincerely,
